TO REMOVE WARTS.

THE SUPERSTITIOUS NOTIONS CON-

the Troublesome Visitors—Charms of All Folk Lore

Warts are especially undesirable possessions although it has been thought that the presence of one on the right hand and it has been thought that the presence of one on the right hand and it has been thought and the presence of one on the right hand and it has been the presence of one on the right hand and it was a self of these troublesome visitors are on record and some of them are sufficiently curious to ment mention. They may be banished say some by merely wishing them gone. The Breton peasant passes his hands over them, makes the sign of the cross, and bids them go in God's name. In Deux Sevres you must punch them each time you think of them and say, 'One! In Lusatis, when you see a funeral pass say,' Thou! thou in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost.' Or, when two carriages pass say. Get out! get out!' The troublesome warts will follow the procession. A funeral procession is utilized in It cland by saying, May these warts and this corpse pass away and never more return. In the name, etc. The warts must be rubbed with the hand during this time.

must be rubbed with the hand during this time.

In Lancashire, the warts may be rubbed with a cinder which must then be wrapped in paper and dropped at cross reads. Whosoever picks it up will get the warts. In Lusatia, certain marine peturfactions picked up on the beach are used in the same way, with the addition of the formula. In the name of the Pather etc. In Lower Brittany, small buttons are made of slate and the credu lous peasants count out as many as the number of their warts inclose them in paper to look like a roll of pennies, and throw this away on the first road, belleving that the person who shall pick up ing that the person who shall pick up the deceptive package will take the warts with him In Deux Sevres, as many

I have heard when a boy that a piece of beef would cause them to disappear, if they are rubbed with it and the beef buried. There are many variations in this remedy in various parts of the world. this remedy in various parts of the world It is perhaps the most popular cure of ill those given In Northumberland, Devonshire and Lancashire the beef should be stolen and in Doux Sevres, two pieces must be used and then tied to gether In Lancashire it is not buried. but must be carefully nailed up on a gate post at a point where four lanes end, or any other secure place, and suffered to dicay. In Devonshire the beef must be throw over a wall and your left shoulder

In Scotland stolen bacon is necessary and lard from a male pig in the Vosges mountains burned deep in the ground. In Lower Brittany, you must steal a piece of lard from your neighbors chimney, taking care not to get caught at it, rub the warts with it and put it in a manure pile. Norman peasants use a pork rind and put it in a rut in the road, when a carriage passes over it a cure is insured. In Vivarais France, rub with the down of the broom plant and throw it over your shoulder into the road. Poss on beans are employed in many places. In on beans are employed in many places In Upper Brittany the warts must be rubbed with small peas, which are then cast into a well or fountain As they rot, the warts will disappear In the Vosges mountains you may take as many peas as there are warts and cast them on the fire, taking care to run away so as not to hear them explode

In the Vesges knots are tied in a string, one in each wart and the string thrown over the shoulder without looking to see what becomes of it. Others say to put the string under a stone which you may not be able to find again or under the pa ternal roof tiles. In one part of England, each wart must be touched with its knot, and the string buried in a moist place, while the formula There is none to re-deem it besides thee is repeated In Lusatia stalks of grain containing as many knots as there are warts, are used, passing each knot three times over them and saying In the name of the Father,"

Umbrellas a Mark of Honor.

It certainly is strange that in almost all nations and in all ages there should have been this same singular pealous regal monopoly of so useful an object as a portable sunshade, which was also available as a protection against rain But so it has ever been, even in the high est civilizations of early ages. We find it depicted on some of the most ancient sculptures of Persepolis, and also on those of Babylon and Nineveh, but always as a distinctive mark of honor for the great men and rulers. The Assyran bas reliefs show slaves holding a richly orna mented umbrella above the head of the monarch not only in scenes of peace, but even in time of war. It appears to be fringed with tassels, and is provided on womarch not only mar it appears to be fringed with tassels, and is provided on one side with an embroidered curtain. In these sculptures the mark of distinction is reserved exclusively for the monarch, and it never overshadows any other person however eminent. The same thing is observed in the sculptures of Babylon and Nineveh, in which the king alone is thus distinguished. Of the ancient Mexican emperors it is likewise recorded that not only were they borne by relays of great nobies but also that four more nobles of high estate were appointed to uphold the sacred umbreils which added dignity to the imperial procession. to upned the sacra immersal procession added dignity to the impersal procession. Even in the beginning of the present century the Mohammedan ruler of Hindustan claimed a monopoly of the use of the sunshade, and no one was permitted to carry an umbrella in the imperial presence—English Illustrated Magazine -English Illustrated Magazine rest, if not of exhibitation in the early as should end a brain task as he ends a gymnastic exercise or exercise in the gar den. The moment study becomes toil it is unnatural and indicates false principles. I do not say that taking our young people as they are this joyous brain work can always be secured, but that it is the normal condition of a student not previously enervated by abrevive methods of study and work.

On the contrary, I find every law of right brain work violated—mainly through ignorance, and the inflamed brain, gorged with poisoned blood, is whipped and prodded to accomplish its tasks. Our high honor students are nerve shaken, dyspeptic hysterical, weak eyed and marked in early life with signs of feeble ness. This feebleness reacts on their mental and moral fiber, giving a sickly piety and a watery human sympathy in mental and moral fiber, giving a sickly piety and a watery human sympathy in the place of a sturdy morality and strong humaneness. The case with young women students is even worse. The girl insists upon keeping her emotional nature to the front, and so long as she is not broken down entirely finds a relief from her tasks in sentiment. But she is liable to break entirely and live on, a susceptible, hysterical pluful and useless life—M. Maurice M. D. in Globe Democrat.

The Phrase "So to Speak ' The most disagreeable phrase in frequent use by Americans so to speak, is 'so to speak It is useless and it is ill conditioned. It is used to fill up awkward conditioned. It is used to int up awayand cracks, as a Canadian uses his senseless shi ehi ehi and an Englishman his don cher know. By the way no nation on earth uses so few provincialisms as the earth uses so lew provincialisms as the American so to speak, and the worst one used by people with an approach to culture is, so to speak. It is borrowed, how ever, so to speak from the English The London Telegraph says. 'Alfred Nobel tamed nitro glycerine so to speak.' Frankin tamed lightning also so to speak and Childrenth. was if—had a hand in rranging tamen ignorming also be speak—and Goldsmith—was it?—had a hand in Taming the Shrow" so to speak On the whole no one needs that you tell him that you speak so for he has sense to unders and it for himself so to speak— Globe Democrat Some Qualities of Voice

Those who possess unrefined or common voices should endeavor to remedy this defect by educating their voices, as a singer does, or the careful study under an elo does, or 1th careful study under an elocutionist, with respect for accentuation modulation and pronunciation. The saddest defect of nature, a bad voice, can be entirely remedied, and a vulgar, whining voice can be made musical.—M. E. W.

Death of a Veteran Wabash Conductor After a Brief Illness.

DIED-On Saturday night, January 19, at 11-3 dlock, of blood poisoning at 922 East North treet, WALTER P. MORGAN, in the 52d year of age.

The deceased had been ill but a short time his affliction being a victous carbuncle which first appeared on January 6th, compelling him to remain at home three days. On the 10th he again began work but became so ill on reaching Litchfield that he was forced to surrender his train to his son, Charles, and he came | ted that the fair for the next five years back home to battle with his affliction until death relieved him of his sufferings. it is not likely to go to Olney, Chicago of He received the very best of nursing and, any other out-of-the-way town, but wil medical attention but blood poisoning we hope it to be located at Decatur. had set in and nothing could be done for

The deceased was a native of Storingou. Connecticut, where he was born February 5, 1837. He was a son of the ate Horace Morgan, Sr., and came to Illinois with his parents in 1839, the family residing at Stonington in Christian county a few years, going thence to Taylorville, and to Springfield on March 4th 1849. In 1851, when but 14 years old, Walter entered the employ of the Wa bash railway company, going into the shops, of which he subsequently had full charge. He was wreck master for the road for twenty years, a position he filled with great acceptability. No man was better skilled in the responsible work than Mr. Morgan. He excelled in the management of men and in handling wrecks. During the past 18 years he had been in the train service of the company; the last six years serving as passenger conductor on the St. Louis branch, making his home in Decatur. He was one of the veteran Wabash conductors, a man of strict inv tegrity, watchful, courteous and obliging, always ready for duty and brave in the discharge of arduous work. Some years ago at Catlin, on the main line of the road, during a dark night, he prevented wreck and lose of many lives by his watchfulness and promptness. He was sidetracked waiting for the passenger Decatur captured a bunch of first train to go east. The origin of the recent strike of the Dayson coal miners was a reduction of their wages from 67%c per ton to 62%c with an. 116 inch screen. The screen Morgan, and his sisters are Mrs. C. A. was enlarged last spring from a % to its present size; whereupon the wages were raised from 63%0 per ton to 671/2c. Notice was given on New Year's day that the wages would thereafter be 65c, and work continued until the 4th, when another notice was posted that the wages would be 62%c, hence the strike. 62% cents is the district price with a % inch screen, There was a booming big audience at the opera house Saturday night to see Charley Hoyt's latest comedy, "A Brass Monkey," a skit of three acts satirizing familiar superstitions of the day, trace able to the possession of the hoode monk." The comedy is not so lively not as musical as "Bunch of Keys," "Tin Sol dier," and other plays Hoyt has eleverly written, but is good nevertheless in freshnem of stage business, funny situations cago. The capital is here ready to be lively dialogue, pretty girls, and in having more body to the plot. The new songs "Razzle Dazzle" and "Drill, Ye Terriers Drill," took the house by storm, the three toughs—and they were toughs—winning five recalls in three acts. Miss Flore Five recalls in three acts. Miss Flora Walsh, the winsome soubrette, and Charley Reed, as Jonah were the chief funmakers and became favorites at once. "A Brass Monkey" is very good with its sougs and marches, but there is no such laugh in it as there is in Hoyt's other productions. Perhaps the author is now catering principally to the parquette. The People of Corea. Corean society is divided into three classes, the king, the nobles and the common people The latter live in thatched huts and they are the poorest of the poor. The nobles or yang ban, are the curse of the country They own all the lands and his by squeezing the people who till them for them dress in gorgeous silks. They never go on the street without they have a lot of retainers about them. When they climb up a hill they have one coole behind them and two to hold up their arms. The more money they have the more servants they keep and the generals of the army are among the most pompous of them. One of these silk gowned black horse hair hatted Corean generals was going up one of the hills about the capital, the other day He had two men behind hun to push him and two others held his arms, when Gen Dye, who by the way is twice the man's age, walked by him with a springing step and asked him as he passed if he expected to have that retinue with him in battle. It took ome time for the Corean to appreciate the sarcasm of this remark but it finally crept sarcasm of this female out in the same of the western people laziness and inability were not marks of honor and the next time the two came to ether the yang ban general walked alone -Frank & Carpenter
